CURING THE BLUES.

A New Remedy Recommended by a Minneapolis Physician.

A well-known doctor of Minneapolis who has made a specialty of nervous dis eases, has found a new remedy for "the blues." As no drugs are administered, he has felt safe in experimenting with a and now declares himself thoroughly satisfied with the good results of his treat-ment. His prescription reads something like this: "If you keep the corners of your mouth turned up you can't feel blue." The directions for taking are, "Smile, keep on smiling, don't stop smiling. It sounds ridiculous, doesn't it? Well, just try turning up the corners of well, just try turning up the corners of your mouth, regardless of your mood, and see how it makes you feel; then draw the corners of your mouth down and note the effect, and you will be willing to declare. The doctor treats his nervous patients to medicine when necessary, but when the case is one of pure melancholy without bodily ill, he simply recommends the smile cure. He has the patient remain in his office and smile: If it isn't the genuine article, it must at least be an upward curvature of the corners of the mouth, and the better feelings follow inevitably. The treatments are followed up regularly, and the patients all testify to their good effect. It takes considerable persuasion to induce some of them to apply the cure, and, of course, the greater number of patients are women, for when a man is blue he is bound to be blue in spite of everything, but a woman is more easily persuaded to try to find a cure.

The doctor declares that if persons will only draw down the corners of their mouths and use sufficient will power they can actually shed tears. On the other hand, if they will persistently keep the corners of the mouth turned up pleasant thoughts will chose away the gloomy forehodings. His discovery grew out of an experience in his own home. His wife was of a nervous and rather morbid temperament, and when in a despondent mood he would ask her to "smile a little," until the saying came to be a household joke. But it brought about good results, and then came the inspiration to try the same cure on others.

The doctor has not patented his re-acdy, and it is free to all who choose to take advantage of it.—Minneapolis Jeurnal.

This roused the ire of the women, and they hurried to their houses, procured hatchets and again sallied forth, and no time was to be lost in sending for the male members of their families. Mrs. Lukens attacked a pole at its base, and wielded the hatchet with a vim and dexterity that cast into the shade the much-heralded talents of Carrie Nation, and soon the pole fell with a crash. Then Mrs. Lukens brandished the hatchet threateningly and dared the workmen to moiest her property. Completely cowed by the determined woman, the men left.

Miss Leach pulled up the stakes from in front of her home and threw them as far as she could across the street, and mutilated others that she was unable to pull up.

He is confronted by a condition, it is a good time for him to pay attention to the foed experts and dietetic chemists who have been telling him all along that there is more real nutrition in rice and corn than there is in potatoes. In fact, there appears to be nothing outside of a stringeacy in the vegetable supply that will direct the attention of the poorer classes to the wonderful nutritive properties of our own Indian maize.

Boiled rice and boiled potatoes are similar in their ingredients, possessing about the same percentages of starch, aibunious matter, and water. With rice at 19 cents a pound there is no reason why the poor should suffer for nutritions food. The dietetic chemists and food analysists show even a more marked advantage for Indian corn.
